1 Comments: I cannot believe you are even considering routing shipments of spent fuel through the Chicago area. Although I'm not particularly worried about the leakage problem from fuel just passing through here, I'm also used to traffic in this area. Why on earth anyone would choose to use some of the most congested roadways in the U.S.--passing through a major population area--seems to me to be totally irresponsible--and frankly, asking for trouble. It sounds like the government saying, "I'm bigger than you are, and I can do what I want--whether you like it or not (or whether it's intelligent or not)."
